

WHAT KILLED THE DINOSAURS?

Dinosaurs lived prior to the flood. How long before we are not sure. Some may have even been alive at the time of the flood. Many believe that those on land were referred to as Behemoth and those in the water as Leviathan. There are many examples in the fossils of high places where many of these natural enemies even accumulated together to try to survive the flood. Why would dreaded natural enemies gather together on hilltops is a question one needs to ask themselves. Obviously it was because of the flood.

Archaeological records could be the records of their destruction at the time of the great flood.

Magnetic strength of the earth

The magnetic strength of the earth is decreasing. It is the magnetic poles that are responsible for the air pressure and oxygen rates on earth. These decreases can be extrapolated to show that 6000 years ago there was much more oxygen in the air. They calculate that there could have been as much as twice the amount of oxygen in the air 6000 years ago as compared to today. They also know that dinosaurs required much more oxygen to survive than us humans. If the oxygen levels were suddenly decreased by 50% it would have killed every species of prehistoric animal on earth.

Because there was much more oxygen in the air, the animals and plants would have grown at a much faster rate than in today's climate. Scientists also know that at those oxygen levels the animals would have grown much older. Humans could have grown much older too because of the extra oxygen. The plasma in the blood at that level would have been super saturated, causing us to do all kinds of great things physically. They estimate that this difference would have been extreme for humans. For example, with twice the oxygen level a human could run a hundred miles before becoming exhausted.

Scientists have found tiny air pockets in the fossils of some insects that reveal the oxygen level was more than double what it is today compared to when the insect was fossilized. Scientists have taken plants and grown them in hyperbaric chambers with high oxygen levels, finding out that the plants grew huge and their fruit was even huge. Technically it would have been the carbon monoxide given off by the animals and plants that would have caused them to grow much larger, not the actual oxygen.

Ps. 19:2-7 "The heavens declare the glory of God, the dome of the sky speaks the work of his hands. Every day it utters speech, every night it reveals knowledge. Without speech, without a word, without their voices being heard, 5 their line goes out through all the earth and their words to the end of the world. In them He places a tent for the sun, 6 which comes out like a bridegroom from the bridal chamber, with delight like an athlete to run his race. 7 It rises at one side of the sky, circles around to the other side, and nothing escapes its heat. (CJB)

When the canopy (dome) was removed at the time of Noah's great flood and the earth gave up its water, everything changed and the dinosaurs died instantly because of a lack of oxygen in the atmosphere. At the time of Adam and Eve there was still probably more oxygen and that is the reason the Garden of Eden was so incredible lush and nourishing. It would have contained huge plants, fruits, and vegetables. The decomposition of these plants and animals would have formed more oil deposits in the earth than under today's oxygen levels. That could also be the reason many people like Methuselah lived so long.

Population rates

In 1800 it is estimated there were about 1 billion people on earth. In about 30 AD (the time of the Messiah) there were about 250 million people on earth. With those rates, if we take them backwards, all things being equal, using the same ratios (all things being equal), if man had been around for 1.6 million years like many claim, using that same logic, today there would be 150,000 people per square inch. If however you take these calculations to about 6000 years ago, it is estimated that there would have been less than a dozen people on earth, just like the time of Noah and his family.

In 1985 there were 5 billion people on earth.

In 2009 there were about 6 billion people on the planet. Just to give a visual aid for this I will reveal that 6 billion people could be put together standing side by side twice in the city limits of many major cities throughout the world. It's a lot of people, but the reality is, there is a lot of space on earth. The radius of the earth is 6378.1 klms.

Moon moving away

The moon is also moving slightly farther away from the earth in its orbit around the earth. This is a scientific fact that can and has been calculated out. If we extrapolate those calculations backwards we find out that if the earth was hundreds of millions of years old the tides upon the earth back then would have wiped out every living thing on the planet twice a day. However, when those same calculations are used 6000 years back everything fits in perfect harmony with what we believe in the Book of Genesis and what exists right now.

Dust on the moon

We know that dust collects on the moon and earth. If the moon was 100's of millions of years old like evolutionists claim, according to Nasa's calculations, the dust on the moon should have been from a couple hundred feet deep to several miles deep. As of 1969 we now know that the dust was only a few inches thick. This is more proof that our solar system is not as old as many try to proclaim it to be.

FOSSILS

Any amount of research will reveal to those interested, that the transition concept taught in regards to evolution is simply hogwash. Of all the millions of fossils found there has never been one fossil that shows an animal in transition, as evolution speaks of. There has never been a fossil of an animal with a fin and a wing, or hair and a gill, etc. As far as most intelligent people go, this very fact is enough to throw the theory of evolution out the door where it belongs. Because they have never been able to come up with proof of this ridiculous theory many have now been looking for ways to to explain the discrepancy. They have been unable to come up with any fossils to back up their evolution theory in regards to transitions of animals, so many came up with what is called the “hopeful monster theory”. This theory states that for example; all of a sudden a frog became a bird. In other words there was no transition, it just happened instantly. A monkey immediately becoming a man would be seen as a joke, yet a monkey becoming a man over many years is considered science to many. How can this be? This is called spontaneous generation, yet this theory of course has never been observed.

The age of fossils is determined, according to the encyclopedia, by the age of the rock strata in which they lie.

Palaeontology, on the other hand says the age of the rocks are determined by the age of the fossils found in them. The circular thinking of these two statements is easy to see. It is absurd to make such statements.

(Mar 22/16) Jerry Hennig